BRIDE CLAMORS FOR DISROBING ACT IN COURT-ROOM

Insists Woman She Accuses Is Fully Garbed in Her Trousseau.

DETAILS CAUSE BLUSH.

Magistrate Breen Calls a Halt on Minute Recital of Catalogue.

The innate modesty of Magistrate Breen is being rudely shocked these days. Only a day or two ago a sweet young prisoner called him "a dear old dying to hug him. Then, to-day there came before him a young bride who, in a stress of emotion, endeavored to describe her trousseau down to the last fluttering strand of baby ribbon. And this same bride, who was a complainly gowned defendant remove in the presence of the blushing Court articles of that selfsame trousseau. The hap-less Judge's feelings so rehed his collar and singed the edges of the magisteria

This all came about in Harlem court in the case of Mrs. Ida Friedlander vs. Mrs. Louisa Burlage. Mrs. Ida is the bride, and there was a bridy radiance and glamor about her smart brown tailor-made suit, the flame-yellow plumes of her Nell Gwynne nat, the fluttering frou-frou' of many skirts, the dainty fur collarette and the big saucy muff. At least, that was the way the poetic court clerk put it.

Claimed Rival's Garb. The defendant was also smartly, if not elegantly gowned, in a box-plaited Broadcloth skirt, lace waist, long caracul coat and a startling creation that Back Numbers, Said Magisthrew into high relief the golden blond-ness of her air. But if the word of the bride is to be taken, the defendant's plumage was not only borrowed but stolen. Not only the box-plaited broadcloth skirt and the wonderful lace shirt waist, but-

Magistrate Breen stopped her on the At least, he tried to stop her and flourished his gavel and bit off a Jersey City, were arraigned before tassel of his mustache.

Policeman Gilligan had blushed himself out when he reached the tribunal front of the Yorkville Theatre last night, where he found the bride clinging to the arm of Mrs. Burlage and announcing that she had spoiled her several honeymoony rufles and things.

Demanded Disrobing Act. to take them off the lady right in the public street. Then Sergt, McCormick along and she told him more, and again to the Lleutenant in the station, Your Honor, and him not married nor knowing anything about trus-

"Let me explain, Judge, let me explain," panted the floor haughtily with her boot. "I was only married last December, and with the lovellest trousseau. Joe and I came to New York for our honeymoon intending to go in a month or so to San Francisco, where his business is." "And we stormed to the stormed to the policeman of the po has on, your Honor. I wish you would make her show. Make her take off that make her show. Make her take off that skirt of mine—my honeymoon skirt"—ther voice was tremulous and tearful—"and my honeymoon waist, and my honeymoon petucoat. And then thera is the corset cover, with the lace tucks and the pink ribbon, and"—the pink ribbon, and the corset cover, with the lace tucks and the pink ribbon, and the ribbon and the cover sternly.

"That is sufficient," interrupted the Court, sternly.

"But I haven't begun to tell you!" cried the bride. "And I know she has them on. I had them all laid away in the tray, with little sachet bags and pink paper that rustied with the lace. And they looked so beautiful and made me so happy. There was one, You'r Honor, with real Swiss lace and baby ribbon drawn through it, and it" "Madame," groaned the Judge, "this not a boarding school or a sewing circle. Do I understand that you charge this defendant with the larceny of your clothes? Answer 'yes,' or 'no'." "I do," said the bride wistfully. "What have you to say?" Mrs. Burliege was asked.

"It is false," the prisoner cried, dramatically. "I can prove they are mine. I will listen to no more. I must go home to my boarders." "You can go home to your boarders when you furnish $1,000 bail," announced the Court. "I will hold you in that sum for further examination, when you wear is your own." And the Magistrate wiped his dripping forehead and turned savagely to a trembling peddler who was led to the bar.

Bride Who Accuses Landlady of Wearing Her Trousseau

trate Corrigan, Who Discharged Raided Men.

No. 203 West Fifty-second street, a Magistrate Corrigan, in Jefferson Mar ket Court, charged with conducting pool-room on Broadway between Thirt ninth and Fortleth streets. Plain clothesman Cunniff, of the West Thirtieth street station, put in evidence "form sheets" and "betting honeymoon by appropriating her most sheets," as he termed them, which he

The bride tossed her head petulantly. "If you knew anything about these things you would understand my fedings." I never was a bride," said Magistrate Breen, huskily.
"Oh, indeed," said Mrs. Friedlander crushingly. "But, to continue. I went to this person and asked her about the trings. She knew nothing. Did I come to insult her? She would have me arrested for slander. I decided to haunt the region of her boarding house. And yesterday I found her with my things on.

Introducing the "Colonial" Refrigerator

The First Solid Oak Retrigerator Ever Sold at Such a Low Price

LL high-priced refrigerators are-or should be-made of oak. All low-priced refrigerators have heretofore been made of ash or elm-much cheaper woods. In the "Colonial"-a new line for 1908-we present for the first time at a low price a refrigerator made of solid oak, thoroughly seasoned, with galvanized lining, nickelplated locks and hinges, removable drip-pipe, galvanized steel shelves and hinged apron for convenience in removing drip-pan.

The design is scientific and the construction thorough. The 'Colonial'' is by far the best refrigerator we have ever seen at the price. As an early-season introjuctory offer we make special prices on the six most popular sizes, as follows:
